Since 2009, MALAK NOMAN SHAHER, 24, has been a journalist for Yemen Times in Sana'a, Yemen. As a features reporter, Shaher primarily reports on women, health, society and culture. She received her bachelor's degree in English from Sana'a University in 2009, a Basic French language certificate from the French Cultural Center in Yemen in 2010, and a Fundamentals of Journalism certificate from the Yemen Times in 2010. Shaher also holds a translation certificate from the Elite Academic Institute from 2008.

Previously, Shaher worked as a translator for Yemen Times and the Arab Bureau for Translation. At the Yemen Times, she led training sessions for three groups of undergraduates on news translations from Arabic to English. Some of her trainees have since become freelance journalists for Yemen Times.

During her fellowship, Shaher would like to learn about the American media and focus her writing on business and politics.

Shaher is the first Fellow in AFPP's partnership with Yemen Times. While in the US, she will be working at the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette in Pittsburgh, PA for three months.

Please join us in welcoming Ms. Shaher to Indianapolis.
